We've been designing and engineering innovative freeform skateparks for communities across the UK since 2002. But we're also passionate skaters and riders with professionals on the team who know what makes a cutting edge skatepark.

We've helped pioneer a new generation of urban landscapes for wheeled sports that are making communities more exciting places to be part of. From low key neighbourhood skateparks to pro and competition level facilities, our parks are making headlines for all the right reasons. Not mention our expert skatepark repair and maintenance service to ensure your park is safe and on top form.

Gravity has put its name on over 300 skateparks around the UK and our success on the UK wheeled sports scene is down to the communities, councils and architects who rely on us to transform their inner cities and open spaces into exhilarating, breathtaking environments.

it's what we do.

Skateboarding hasn't stopped flying since the 1950s. It's now one of the fastest growing sports in the world and consistently ranks as one of the top ten sports globally.

It's not hard to see why the skate scene is still flying. There's a mutual, unspoken respect among skaters and riders that helps to bring communities together, reduces anti-social behaviour, builds friendships and confidence and changes lives for the better.

So now the demand for new, more technically challenging parks is on the rise and it's the pressure to create dynamic, yet controlled spaces that inspire users and please the planners that really separates us from the rest.

And that's why everyone, from skaters and riders to councils and landscape architects, always talks to Gravity first.

“to build what
people want and need
you have to be involved with
the sport outside of
the company
and this is
what gravity
provides”

lee blackwell

“the first question i ask
when i get to a new park
is who designed it,
if it's gravity
i'm always
stoked”

paul young

Given the dramatic rise in wheeled sports popularity, it's not surprising that the majority of campaigns to build new skateparks start with the riders themselves.

Social networking has given a new impetus to the drive to get parks onto the drawing board and into the local community and helps us respond fast to enquiries and push a plan through. User-led consultations that build in the needs of skaters and local residents and encourage everyone to get involved from the design stage will always make the cut.

Our experience with councils and planning departments also gives us the edge. We know how to create great schemes that build in safety, security, maintenance and usability.

Gravity has a team of designers, engineers and project managers that do just that. From the first enquiry to the first kickflip, we've got it all covered.

it's how we do it.

Skateparks

We don't just design and build state of the art skateparks. We create full on, exhilarating escapes that are designed to last for generations of tough, punishing use within landscaped settings that integrate social, architectural and environmental demands too.

Beyond the business end of ledges, rails, banks and bowls, we build in pathways, fencing, seating, shelters and lighting that draw everyone in for longer all year round.

Beyond that, and because we have complete faith in the high standards of workmanship that we set ourselves, every skatepark is covered by a comprehensive warranty package that guarantees our products, surfaces and structures.

And in the meantime, we have a reputation to consider. A Gravity skatepark will remain in perfect, world class condition year after year because we come back regularly to inspect every curve and corner. Our extensive maintenance service is used by local authorities across the UK, even if Gravity didn't build your Skatepark, you can rely on our professional maintenance teams to keep your concrete or steel facility in tip top condition.

“the cardiff
barrage plaza
is genuinely the
most fun thing
i've skated since i
can remember.

the design is
lightyears
ahead of its competitors”

“the parks that
gravity make are sick with
stuff in them
that no one else is doing in the uk!”
